Description:

Design Thinking for Business Innovation was a workshop that was organized to offer both conceptual and working knowledge to students who had signed up for the same.

This workshop was attended by 45 students from all the specializations. The students were made into teams and they were made to work on a wicked problem.

The session was divided into two halves- first half of the session was focused on problem identification and specification and the second half was focused in developing a prototype of a product/experience to solve this problem and make a presentation.

The workshop was well received which encouraged us to develop a three-credit course on Innovation and Design Thinking.
